COAT-POCKET LITERATURE

BLESS those benefactors who issue the best liter-ature in portable size! How comfortable to snatch a bit of wholesome reading, while going to and from office or shop.

It is remarkable how many editions may be had in small-size volumes. The evolution of thin paper has made this practicable. In consequence a compact library in the home is now possible.

We have the best there is in pocket editions, from popular fiction to the standard classics, and these are constantly augmented by new works. These little books are an incentive to good reading when routine labors obstruct more sustained perusal.

I felt it all as positively then in my young days [st. 34-36.] as I do now in my dones [st. 68.]; to formulate a poem whose every thought or fact should directly indirectly be 'r connive at an implicit belief in the wisdom, health, mystery sauty of every process, every concrete object, every human or other existence, not ally consider'd from the point of view of all, but of each. . . One main posits-motive of the "Leaves" was my conviction (just as strong today as every at the crowning growth of the United States is to be spiritual and heroic. To its start and favor that growth—or even to call attention to it, or the need of it—the beginning, middle and final purpose of the poems.

And, again in that credo, these two magnificent passages. Number one call proud Humility:

y the profoundest service that poems or any other writings can do for ader is not merely to satisfy the intellect, or supply something polish'd and ing, nor even to depict great passions, or persons or events, but to fill gorous and clean manliness, religiousness, and give him good Acart as a possession and habit. . . Without yielding an inch the working-man raking-woman were to be in my pages from first to last.

The fact, I insist again, remaining solid and clean amid the critical e, of the man who wrote the lines which one of Father Tribune's ters—craft brother he in the guild to which Whitman belonged—promised should be set in some kind of type that would "smack 'em in the eye" ining your eyes); the lines, to come to the point, which appear at the top-his little place.

The fact, also, of the man whose work many good craftsmen said any truly thought, was formless and shiftless, but the man whose set of rules for his craftsmanship was thus austere and exacting: (You see, I am trying early to crowd in some of the Whitman extracts I have been making this week lest, as usual in these articles, four-fifths of them go "hell-box" ward, as printers call that grim depository of unused type; am trying to crowd in as many of the veritable Whitman words as possible because I think that Whitman's point of view on his work, overwrought, even flamboyant as it often is, is still the essential point of view on Whitman). The man, then, whose rules by himself and for himself were thus austere and exacting:

Make no quotations, and no reference of any other writers.

Lumber the writing with nothing-let go as lightly as the bird files in the or a fish swims in the sea.

Avoid all poetical similes; be faithed to the perfect likelihoods of nature healthy, exact, simple, disdaining orna-

Old John Burroughs thought those rules so requisite to the attainment the right point of view on Whitman that he included them in his extended them in his e persons; Aerce men and women pour forth, as the sea to the whistle of death pours its sweeping and unript waves; outside authority enters always after the precedence of inside authority;

There the city of the faithfulest friends stands;
There the city of the cleanliness of the sexue stands;
There the city of the healthiest fathere stands;
There the city of the best-boiled mothers stands,
here the great city stands.

Now, I left out the fifth verse from the beginning of that passage as it ands in the text not because I wanted to cheat—Whitman is a poor place begin that in—but because I wanted to take it up by itself. That verse Where the men and women think lightly of the laws.

Where the men call women think lightly of the laws.

In that short line—a short one for Whitman—is the source of seventy years of trouble; a trouble that searched out the vitals of Whitman's enemy-critics with a good deal sharper pang than it did his capacious ones. ("Don't deliver it!" squealed James Russell Lowell to an English noble who had brought a letter of introduction to Whitman. "Don't deliver it! Do you know who Walt Whitman is? Why—a rowdy, a New York tough, a loafer, a frequenter of low places—friend of cab drivers!") Whitman did want men to "think lightly of the laws" when "the laws" meant hide-binding regulations; meant rules and orders and traditions and superstitions that cast fresh, oncoming exultant human material into the same mold that had held long gone generations of men. The fact remains, and it is one of the glories of his strange life, life at once so majestic and so "queer," as the saying is, that he was essentially servant and soldier and celebrant of the essential laws—laws having to do with human freedom en masse and with individual liberty. That he was such a servant, soldier and celebrant he proved at dear cost. He served in the most exacting and least exhilarating way for nearly three years to help enforce such laws. He served—served with his hands and eye—patriots and rebels and white men and black men in the Union hospitals. And because he was tireless, and because he would let himself be revolted by no task however sickening, he laid the foundations of a disease that wrecked the remainder of his physical life and, during a considerable part of that remainder, kept him prisoner to a wheeled chair. He was for law, all right, just so long as it fostered and was compatible with what he was also ever serving and celebrating—"the dear love of comrades." And by comrades he meant not individuals alone, but cities, states, kingdoms, republics. Lowell, was right. For Whitman did also mean "dear comradeship" of and with cab drivers, of and with "frequenters of low places," and to them he shut you out."

Many things about Whitman are taken for granted by persons who have read essays about him but who never gave haif a day's exact attention to Whitman's "Leaves." But one of the things about Whitman that emphatically is not to be taken for granted is that he was an undiscriminating lover and celebrant of "the dear comrades." He had, indeed, a goodly streak of aristocrat in him. He came of a family that is numbered among the Caucasian families longest planted in our northern soil. He was unusual and not dandified in dress, but he was extremely fastidious as to the cleanliness of his person and raiment. When he used the word "radical," as he does use it in the third of the credo passages quoted above, he used it, not socially or politically, but in its original Latin significance—radix meaning root. And he could, upon occasion, he regally intolerant, as in his appalling distribe on Samuel Johnson. He loved, and he proclaimed that he was writing for, "the average man," but he did not like average qualities or average poetry, and in the "Boughs" credo he declares the mission of "these states," as he loved to call his country, to he—ploughing up in earnest the interminable average fallows of humanity—

"good government" merely, in the common sense—is the justification and main rose of these United States.

One of the quaintest finds in literature was the discovery of written proof his consciousness that "these states" and the "dear comrades" had a great of of plowing still to do. That proof was a scrap of paper found on the or of the foriors house in Mickle street, Camden, where he passed the last cade of his life. Horace Traubel found it, gave it finally to Newton of the uppenities," and Newton, having used its text as a Christmas card in a panic ar of our annals, reproduced it in his collection called "A Magnificent roe." The scrap of paper bore these words:

Go on, my dear Americans, whip your horses to the utmost—excitement! money! this is per under such mementum you can't stop if you would. Only make provision, in the such mementum you can't stop if you would. Only make provision, in the states and new states, for several thousand insane asyiums. You are a fair way to create a whole nation of lunatics.

Horace Traubel gave the old man a siy look as he read that out, and the man replied to the look with, "That's old, hid, and kind o' gloent—don't a think?—for me. Yet I don't know but it'still holds good."

Another Travel Masterpiece

By HARRY A. FRANCK

Author of "A Vagabond Journey Around the World," etc.

NEVER before has Mr. Franck used to better ad-N vantage his unique travel experience and his gift of getting on paper strange peoples and significant places as they actually are.

This new book is the first fruit of a two-year period of living in and adventuring through the lands of the fascinating Chinese, including their old prov-ince, Korea. In "Wandering in Northern China," Mr. Franck places before the reader present-day Korea, Manchuria, Red Mongolia and, generally speaking, the northern section of China proper. And at the same time he records the enthralling narrative of his many adventures. The book has humor, pictures of the vast lands and varied peoples that bite into the memory, a sketch of Chinese history, little stories by the way that touch the sympathies of the reader.

"Wandering in Northern China" is a handsome octavo volume of over 500 pages with nearly 200 illustrations from photographs taken by the author. (Price $5.00.)

It is a dramatic story of New York City today, with a heroine you will never forget. For redhaired Jo Ellen, unsentimental, courageous, is the kind who faces the adventures of life and love as she finds them—and wins.

$2.00 stamp of a pretty foot in the dance of the Tziganes-the heroine in hiding as a member of a wandering band, the hero as gallant a knight errant as fair maiden could wish for-a story that is a story-of high adventure and young love—robust and wholesome, altogether delightful. $2.00

Here's to the Gods By Austin Parker

A VIGOROUS story of modern youth and especially of Tony Morton, reckless, disillusioned by the war, yet alive with the high courage that will not let him play safe with life. It is a dramatic tale, a love story against a vivid background and with an ending ground and with an ending which is out of the ordinary.

IN CROATAN Mary Johnston has returned to the approximate period and

In this new novel she has woven her story about that band of English settlers sent by Sir Walter Raleigh from Plymouth in 1587 to settle in Virginia.

CROATAN combines the dramatic incident and rush of action characteristic of her earliest books with the more mature and flexible art of "1492"—a singularly

The first six volumes of the "People's Library," which is to be published in America by Messra. Doran, will be issued here before the end of the month. This library is intended for the class, ever increasing in England, that, without very much culture, has genuine intellectual curiosity and is eager for introductions to knowledge. It is the class that I know particularly well as editor of "John o' London's Weekly," and the volumes of the "People's Library," of which also I am editor, have been selected as incentives to further reading. They include a vivid life of St. Francis of Assisi by G. E. > LABYRINTH By Helen R. Hull

"Helen Hull in her new novel has not only sustained the reputation for deft craftsmanship which she gained with her first novel, but also has added immensely to it. . A delightfully constructed analysis of the greatest problem of men and women and children today. It is refreshing because it is neither bitter nor one sided. It is amused more often than it is serious over its theme, and by so much it carries further."—New York Herald.

FIVE MUNICIPAL JUDGES GET O. K. FOR HIGHER JOBS

Judge Hayes, who had been a track athlete of some note at the University of Michigan, was admitted to the bar in 1961. From 1907 to 1911 he was one of the principal assistants in the office of Corporation Counsel Edward J. Brundage. He was elected to the Municipal bench in 1916 and was released in 1922.

"He has made a good record as judge of the Municipal court, and we regard him as qualified for the office of judge of the Superior court," read the report of the Bar association.

-and yet it costs so little that everyone can drink it

You can get the finest coffee the world produces— lected berries from the coffee countries' choicest crops - at a price so low that everyone can afford to drink it. The name of this coffee is MONARCH. For 70 years Monarch has been the accepted brand in homes whe highest quality is demanded.

Monarch Coffee takes the shortest route from planta tion to you. Distributing costs are thus reduced to the minimum. Millions of pounds are consumed each year by critical coffee drinkers. Such tremendous production reduces the price still further.

Are you benefiting by all these savings? If not, order a package of Monarch from your grocer today. One trial will convince you that there's no better coffee obtainable, no matter how much you pay for it. You'll never be satisfied with any other coffee after you've tried your first cup of Monarch.

Drivers are salesmen of service

Advertising is the life of trade—the key which opens the gate of progress. To tell the public who you are—what you are doing —what you have to sell, is imperative. That's the way to win attention and build confidence, providing you can deliver the goods.

Yellow Cab sells

rides. Its drivers are its salesmen. As only intelligent, decent and reliable men can sell successfully and keep their customers sold, we use a finetooth-comb on their personal histories before they are employed. We don't take them if we find anything against them mentally, morally or physically.

You may think this is unnecessary. The history of the Yellow Cab's unusual success proves to the contrary. Such well-chosen men realize what we are trying to do. They naturally affiliate and work together. They have the brains to see that their interests and the Company's interests are identical. Had we been less careful had we relied on written dations and personal influence, as you often do when you hire a private chauffeur, we never would have gathered together the splendid class of men we have

Such men are am-

Of course, being human, they slip occasionally. So do all of us. It would be funny if we didn't. But as a class and a body, these men have no equals in the cab industry.

How to Be Happy Though Married

Not by reminding the boy of his inexperience may much be accomplished. An appeal to his chivalry and to his maniliness is the course to adopt. Let father point out to him that he has no right to ask a girl to marry him when he has no prospects of being able to give her a decent home. That the girl is willing is no excuse for a regular, self-respecting man. To ask a girl to share with him a small pigeon hole with a disapparing bathtub and beans cooked on a revolving gas plate isn't exactly endorsing the young male that it isn't kind to your mother and daddy and, besides, you realty will never get anywhere in this world it you are going to become expert in tricks of deceit and cunning. I am glad you did not take the ring. But proper for a girl to accept an engagement ring if her parents do not know anything about it? Wonarsm."

Now dearest, I don't like to hear of you carrying on a secret romance like that! It isn't kind to your mother and daddy and, besides, you realty will never get anywhere in this world if you are going to become expert in tricks of deceit and cunning. We Picture a Rendition of the Shaving Brush Trim

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The brushwood boy and the shaving brush girl met and passed each other by. He couldn't see how he could ever keep that thing she wore in her hat from putting out his eye if he tried to kiss her, and she couldn't see how she could be stylish without it, and what was life worth otherwise This little shaving brush is the trim ming unique of the season. In Paris the aigrette, posed forward, was the mode for several seasons, and after that came two brushes, one brown and that came two brushes, one brown and one black. Now in New York the single brush, always coming boldly to the front after being laid off the side of the narrow rim of the small hat, and sometimes even shadowing the face, is quite the ruling passion. Everybody doesn't wear it, to be sure, but those who do belong to the knowledge.

who do belong to the knowingest.

Pictured today along with a glycerined ostrich rendition of the shaving brush hat trim is a late development o the bustle dress in which the tier table nts up to three and the une trimming quietly scores. The model is by Emile Beschoff of Paris—an after-noon gown of black satin creps with two widths of royal blue velvet ribon sarving as trimming on the place. serving as trimming on the plaited flounces and sleeves.

tackle Chicago at Stagg field. Purdue rooters will come in on a special train from Lafayette, Ind., this moraling, accompanied by their 100 piece band, and will stage a parade down Michigan avenue shortly before noon.

The Maroons feel confident they are ready for the invaders. Coach Stagg has his line and back field well drilled on a variety of plays devised to puzzle the Bollermakers. Purdue, though, is prepared to fight all the way and may prove stiff opposition for the unbeaten Staggmen before the game goes into history.

NE of China's leading newspapers—The Sin Wan Pao of Shanghai—has printed a book review of The WGN. The review, which is reproduced above, says in part: "The facsimile clippings of the various editions of the paper during this period (1847-1923) printed in this book are especially interesting."

"The WG N" not only reflects the history of Chicago and the nation, but is also a handbook of the mechanical, editorial, and advertising divisions of a modern, metropolitan newspaper. It tells with the aid of a hundred illustrations how wood becomes paper, how words become type, and how events become news.

"The W G N," with its three hundred pages of newspaper administration, stands as an authoritative reference book as well as an interesting history of the making of the world's greatest newspaper. Journalists, both amateur and professional, printers, paper manufacturers, and advertising men, will find this book especially interesting because of its clear and detailed explanations of newspaper processes.

Cadillac's Used Car Dept. offers one of the best assortments of good used cars in the city. The selections in both Cadillacs and miscellaneous makes are continually changing, and the prospective buyer will find here the car which suits his needs.

Our warranteed cars offer an exceptional opportunity to get a late model, thoroughly dependable Cadillac at a great saving-all units carefully tested, parts replaced wherever necessary, renickeled, repainted, and like a new car in appearance.

Our shop has the finest equipment in the United States for the repair and maintenance of automobiles. All work, including coach work, mechanical repairs, and painting, is done under this roof by our own craftsmen. Inspection of our shop facilities is invited. It will convince you of our ability to condition used cars properly, whether Cadillacs or other makes.

Reorganizes Public School System.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 27.—(Special.)—

Many educators rate Detroit as the forement large American city in adjusting its public school system to the swar developments. Like Chicago and ther centers, this city has had a tremdous growth in school attendance recent years, only here the problems was more pronounced than elsewhere leause of the rapid expansion () the city due to the development of the stomobile industry.

In one tan year period the city population of Detroit doubled while school attendance trebled. The school plant had a great overload, thousands of pipils had to be put on half day sessions as in Chicago. As was the case classifier the increase has been most pranquiced at the top—in the upper
